The repeated answer of the Chinese to applications for trading facilities in the interior of the country, has been that they would be unable to control foreigners, on account of the exterritorial rights which take them out of the pale of Chinese law. The rejoinder to this has always been: "Make your laws and your l administration of them fair and reasonable and the exterritoriality privileges will be no longer necessary." But here the matter has I ended. Wrapped up in old traditions, Chinarefuses even to attempt an amendment upon | did some lively hitting occasionally, though a system of legal administration, which her caution was necessarily the rule. Mr. Carpenmore enlightened men are well aware is full of abuses such as must preclude her from bat for 46. The score is as nuder:---. being upon an equality with civilized nation. in the present day. To set a side minor. matters, the practice of torture is, as mildly put by M. Giquer,—the eleverest foreign advocate the Chinese have ever had—" pas de notre temps," and so long as this unfortunate little anachronism continues, so long will foreignnations be justified in prudently adhering to their exterritoriality privileges, and there will continue to be exactly what the Chinesein their shortsightedness desire, an insuper able difficulty against the admission of foreigners into the country.

.The Japanese, who are placed in precisely the same position by the treaty, have met the difficulty in a very different manner. De sirous, as it is only natural they should be that the supremacy of their own administration over all people within their territory should remain intact, they nevertheless recognise that, before they can claim this, they must make that administration reasonably sound and just, and so remove the very fai grounds for adhering to the exterritoriality privileges, that it would be unsafe to abandon | Road East, charged a soldier of H.M.'s 80th them. They are making assiduous endeavours to introduce a code of laws after the foreign model, and to secure their being fairly and impartially administered. Simul taneously with this, they are organising system of policing for the maintenance of order in the various parts of the kingdom; and it is a significant circumstance that thi latter step is so popular, that it is being sup ported voluntarily by a large number of the leading residents in different parts.

Having done this, they are, according to the last accounts, prepared to declare the whole country open to foreigners, provided they submit to Japanese laws when in the interior, and the arrangement is on all sides admitted to be fair and reasonable. If the laws afford reasonable security to foreigners, there can be no ground on which we can desire to uphold the anomaly of exterritoriality; but it is quite idle for any nation to complain of such an arrangement, unless its laws and administration come up to something like the average of the standard recognised in the present day, as absolutely necesgary for reasonable security and protection,

So long as China continues unable to reform her internal administration, the anomaly of exterritoriality must continue; and although it would be unreasonable to expect her to public streets at Wanchi. effect such extensive changes as would be required, in a short space of time, it is clear that she cannot claim indefinitely the right her nephew, 21 years of age, was kidnapped to of refusing foreign nations the rights and privileges everywhere else accorded, on account of her ewn inherent defects. At the till last night, when she accused him of it very least, she might be expected to make some honest endeavour to reform what no plausibility can represent as other than glaring defects. If a Chinaman of sound mind and average intelligence could be a desirable mode of procedure, provided any other could be found, something might be said even in excuse for continuing such a system, looking at it from a Chinese point of viow; but the Chinese are at once willing to and resided in Taiwan-lane, Wanobi. determined to make no effort to reform it. The news soon spread over the town, and as usual was at first greatly exaggerated, it being asserted that a people had been killed. Fortunately the houses were only used for storage, and the only injury was a slight wound inflicted on a passerby by a falling brick, but it was not sufficiently severe to make it necessary for him to be sent to hospital. The cause of the accident is not quite clear. The houses are situated close to the P. & O. Coal godowns, and the foundations of the new sheds are being cut close alongside the houses which have fallen. The proprietor alleges that he saw a crack three days ago, but he made no report on the subject either to the P. and O. Superintondent or to the Inspector of Buildings. There was sufficient, however, in the nature of the houses to account for a very slight cause bring ing them down. They are stuck together with the heat mortar which Chinese building contractors will always use when not closely looked after. It consists chiefly of mud, with little or no lime, and in dry weather becomes little more than dust between the bricks. The block of houses is eight years old, and no doubt was supported in a great measure by the P. and O. Godown wall adjacent. If the excavations were in part the cause of the accident, the weakness of the building is shewn by the fact that it did

This match was played yesterday, and pro luced a very close contest, the Married Men winning by three rane only. Play commenced at about a quarter past 12, Mr. Deane and Sergeant Newton commencing to bat for the Married Men. The former played a very good innings of 55, the bowling of the Bachelors being particularly weak, with the exception of Mr Parkyn's, which was very steady throughout the innings. The fielding also was not by any means up to the mark, and the number of extras was surprising. Mr. Greig played steadily for his 19, the junings closing for 132. Messrs. THE PASS SYSTEM. Indian corporal No. 450, on duty at Castle Road at 3.30 a.m., where several robberies have been committed of late, and a box beloaging to Colonel Smith, of H.M.'s 80th Regiment, found in the road, saw a coolie coming along with a lamp; as soon as defendant saw him he tried to hide himself at the back of the wall to Mr. May's house, and concealed the lamp. He went up to him and asked for his pass, he showed him one, which he saw at once did not belong to him, as the defendant was not in employment.

Inspector Grimes said he considered something should be done to prevent this habit of transferring passes. Defendant said he was out to see the watchman to Mr. May's house. He got the loan of the pass from a coolie named Cheong-a-see, to go and see his friend. He formerly was employed by Mr. May's cook, Acheong, but the wages were so small that he left. Cheong-a-see, declared, said he was employed at the Parsee house opposite the Roman Catholie Cathedral. The pass belonged to one Kongbing, who was away from the colony, and had left the pass in his core. Defendant was told to find security in two householders $50, each for six months.

STEALING A BOAT. Wong-a-wah, a fisherman at Yow-mah-tee, charged another fisherman named Wong-toochi, with on the 24th January, at Yow-man-tee, stealing his boat which he left on the beach. Complainant stated that he was informed that the defendant took the boat, and the next day. at Sowkewan, he saw the defendant in possession of it; chuse was given, but defendant got out of the hands of police and got away, and was not seen till last night, when he was securely detained. Inspector Strond said he had every reason to hope he would be able to bring home guilt to the defendant; the witnesses were not here, but he asked for a remand to bring them up. The case was then remanded till Monday.

LOVE ME. LOVE MY DOG. (Pall Mall Gasette.)

Among the many miseries of human life there are few more trying than to dine with a valued friend, who has a valued pet dog of a snappish your troubles commence the beast declares war by barking furiously, civility prevents your taking up the poker as a weapon of self-defence, and when at last your assailant is induced by threats or entreaties to retire under the table. he amuses himself by periodically making snaps at your leg, and keeps your, nerves on edge the whole evening by his interesting ferocity. The painful part of the uffair is that if the dog is emall, your host ridicules the idea of your really objecting to be bitten by him. Yet small dogs can not only give disagreeable bites, but are often almost demoniacal in the tenucity with which they cling to their victims; as is shown by the conduct of a fox-terrier one day recently, who, according to the Sporting Gazette, fastened bimself on to the head of a fox hanging from the saddle of a whipper-in, causing the horse to run away, and was only dislodged by the jerk occasioned by the leap of the animal over a five-barred gate; and even then the dog followed the horse with the evident intention of making another dash at its prey. This terrier would no doubt equally cling to the leg of a live guest us to the head of a dead fox, and the incident is worthy of note as showing that dogs, be they large or small, however faithful to their owners, are often dangerous nuisances to those who are not honoured with their

True, they cannot always hide. They must not always hide; or their fellow-creatures would lose the golden lesson. But, nevertheless, it is of the essence of the perfect and womanly heroism, in which as in all spiritual forces, woman transcends the man, that it would hide if it could. And it was a pleasant thought to me, when I glanced lately at the golden deeds of woman in Miss Yongo's book—it was a pleasant thought to me, that I could say to myself-Ah! yes. Benjamin Lumley. THE SANDWICH ISLANDS. Bishop Stanley, late of Honolulu, sends to the Times some particulars relative to the Constitution of the Saudwich Islands. The old dynasty of the Kamehamehas ends with the late King, the fifth of the name, who, like his younger brother and predecessor, reigned about nine years. When Kamehameha IV, acceded to the throne in 1854, he found a Constitution existing based on universal suffrage; no property qual-fication for members of the Legislature required; two Chambers, the Upper, though nominally the biouse of Chiefs, being recruited from foreign residents who had shown any particular interest in the country. Except in a few unimportant points recognizing native Hongkong Pier and Godown Company.-30 ideas and usuges, it was a close copy of the Constitution of any State in the American Union, the King representing the governor of the State. To this Constitution, if not the work at least due to the influence of the American Independent missionaries, the late King, on his accession in 1863, refused to take the outh, and in the following year, notwithstanding the all but unanimous opposition of the natives, led by two or three missionaries, he abrogated it by proclamation, drew up a new one less democratic, fusing the two Chambers into one, and by property and industrial qualification, reduced the con- Kwong-ying-chong to travelling trader. stituency of Honolulu from some thousands to |-400. Even at the present time, it should be understood. the Courts of Judicature, internal administration in every detail, such as the educational, the police, and prison systems, road management, &c., me those of the United States, and I must admit that they work extremely well. The Federal Government at Washington has shown biherto every consideration for the independence of the islands. Whatever influences have been at work so far in favour of annexation have emanated from a portion of the American residents at Honololu and other places in the kingdom. The only approach to any action on the part of the United States acquiring any territorial footing in the country was in 1867, when the American Minister Resident sounded the King on his willingness to sell one of the smaller islands as a coaling station for the steamers about to run between San Francisco and Japan, and touch, as it was then proposed, at Honolulu. "I replied," the King told me, "that the islands were not for sale." An article in the late King's Constitution of 1864 thus provides for the succession :- If the King has no bereditary successor, he nominates during his life one of the high Aliis (Ohiefs) who shall then be approved by the House of Nobles (the Upper Chamber to which I have referred as usually sitting with the Lower), and the person thus chosen by the King and Nobles shall be the lawful successor to the throne. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Chalmers' Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English / THE Undereigned begs to inform the Resiwords, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characi L dents of this Colony, that he is ready to ters. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto published.

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete; that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. I count these things to be grandly true! That a noble deed is a step toward God-Lifting the soul from the common sod To a purer air and a broader view.

We rise by the things that are under our feet By what we have mastered of greed and gain, By the pride deposed and the passion slain, And the vanquished ill that we hourly meet. "We hope, we resolve, we aspire, we trust,

The scene where my adventure opened was father, mother, home, and friends: and I, port of some importance in those days, on the wanderer, laid myself down, and slept; the "American" shore of Lake Erie; and knowing, feeling, praying no more. On the time was the beginning of December. swept the blast; onward swept the boat; and At sunset, or rather a little in advance, per on, too, crept the night. Yes; I am told that my Sailing vessels being firinly frozen in for the Uncle Toby's oath passed through some other species of insect in all stages of metamorphosis. winter, and two or three steamboats locked rough, bearded lips that night-but I was in, in a similar icy embrace, at the town end saved! of the pier. As I reached the beach, and commenced to strap on my skates, the sky bore strong evidence of a coming storm; in fact, a howling blast had already set in from the southern or land side. The ice was smooth, unbroken, and free from snow, and, though strong enough for men, was not safe for horse or sleigh. Just as I started, I perceived, even at that distance, a solitary figure proceeding along the pier to the place of destination, and this proved to be Darby him- pared to accept Marine Risks and issue Policies self, as I afterwards ascertained. Giving myself a good "offing," as scamen might term it—that is, proceeding straight out for about a mile, and then turning to pursue a course parallel with the shore—on the gale at every second went. gathering in strength and violence, so much so, indeed, that I found it a very difficult matter to keep my feet at all; and as the blast beat with all its fury against my 'side, I had to lean against it as against a falling wall with all my strength, which rendered my progress rather slow. I then perceived, when too late, that with all my cleverness I had taken rather too wide an "offing," and should have the greatest difficulty in reaching the lighthouse at all. To make matters still worse, a thin but hard round sleet began to fall, which blinded me, and even at that period filled me with anxiety, if not alarm. Now that I was under weigh, however, I bore up against the difficulty as bravely as I could, and had got within, perhaps, three quarters of a mile of the lighthouse, when I perceived others moving along the pier towards the same point evidently with great difficulty, and at the same time making the most frantic gestures with their arms, plainly indicating danger of some unusual kind, and that, too, in my di- puny, are prepared to grant Marine risks at rection, although as yet invisible to myself. ourrent rates. Dense crowds gathered along the beach, and just as I began to find that with all my strength I was being borne beyond the lightwhouse, a terrific shock, which for a moment mocked the voice of the hurricane, caused the entire surface of the ice to quiver as with an earthquake, and flung me prostrate on my face, whilst a loud and reverberating roar echoed in my ears, and leaned like "the live thunder" from point to point, until it was lost in the distance and wild tuniult of the storm. I have traversed since then the four quarters of the earth; I have seen the hickory, and the oak, and the pine shivered into matches with the lightning before my face; I have seen the strong masts of a ship snapped off like pipe-stems, and flung into the surge; I have stood when earthquake roared and scattered death and have I heard such a sound as that, nor doom!" In a moment I was on my feet again, liey. and comprehended at last the danger of my position. The great body of ice had yielded to the immense pressure of the wind (the centre of the lake being, as I said, open), and split along the coast close to me; and, should I not regain my position on the land side of the chasm thus made, and that, too, at once, I should be borne across the entire width of Lake Erie-at least eighty miles!-to the shores of British America; that is to say, the field whereon I stood were not broken up into minute fragments by the combination of wind and wave. There is no mistake about Lake Erie in those respects; for I have since discovered that the storm-demons have made its comparatively small surface a sort of trysting-place -a small stage of rehearsal for their grander performances around the Cape of Good Hope and Cape Horn. What a prospeet for me, then, on a wild night, with the frost already beginning to pierce my very marrow! Regaining my feet, and running before the wind for 50 or 60 yards, in caler

to gain sufficient impetus, I threw all my death, despite the width of the chasm: a perilous leap to attempt on any occasion, but now doubly so, with the pressure of a hurricane that thrust itself in my face with the force of a falling tower. But I was an excellent skater, and felt a thrill of pride for a moment, as I saw the horror-stricken crowds gazing all at me with breathless suspense. That leap was an achievement now; but it was one destined to lead to no practical result for good. I leaped the chasm, and cleared it and two or three feet of the edge, falling violently backwards as I did so; but no sooner had I risen, and that too with great difficulty, then another shock, less loud but far more disastrous to me, rent once more asunder the great frozen sheet, and another and a wider chasm gaped between myself and the shore! Alas! they cheered and hoped in vain. The cchoes thundered for miles along the beach, and once more I staggered, but did not fall. ward I struggled until I reached edge of the second chasm, and saw that this time the winds had, indeed, done ice had parted from the American shore! and I was rapidly borne upon its death-chilling surface towards the Canadas,
